CUSTOMER IDENTIFICATION PROGRAM NOTICE

To help the government fight the funding of terrorism and money laundering activities, federal law requires financial institutions to obtain, verify and record information that identifies each person who opens an account. This notice answers some questions about the Firm’s Customer Identification Program.

Information We Collect: When you open an account, the Firm is required to collect the following information:

- For Individuals: name, date of birth, residential address, Social Security or taxpayer identification number, government-issued identification number and related information (US driver's license number and residence; passport number, nationality and country of issuance; resident-alien identification number, nationality and residence; etc.). Individuals may also need to provide copies of government-issued photographic identification, passport, utility bill or other identifying documents.
- For Entities: principal place of business, local office, tax identification number. The entity (corporation, partnership, trust, etc.) may also need to provide copies of its organizational documents (articles of incorporation, government-issued business license, partnership or trust agreement, etc.) and information about its beneficial owners, control persons, trustees, etc. (see above).

U.S. Department of the Treasury, Securities and Exchange Commission, and FINRA rules already require you to provide most of this information. These rules also may require you to provide additional information, such as your net worth, annual income, occupation, employment information, investment experience and objectives and risk tolerance.

What happens if I don't provide the information requested or my identity can't be verified? The Firm may not be able to open an account or carry out transactions for you. If the Firm has already opened an account for you, we may have to close it. To help the government fight the funding of terrorism and money laundering activities, federal law requires financial institutions to obtain, verify, and record information that identifies each person who opens an account.

BUSINESS CONTINUITY DISCLOSURE

The Firm has developed a Business Continuity Plan to ensure its preparedness and adaptability to respond to events that significantly disrupt our business operations. Summarized below, the Firm's Business Continuity Plan provides for variations in our response to an actual event since the timing, location, and impact of disasters and disruptions are unpredictable.

The Firm plans to quickly recover and resume business operations after a significant business disruption and respond by safeguarding our employees, associated persons and property; making a financial and operational assessment; protecting our Firm's books and records; and allowing us to transact business. In short, our Business Continuity Plan is designed to permit our Firm to resume operations as quickly as possible, given the scope and severity of the significant business disruption. Our Business Continuity Plan addresses data back-up and recovery; all mission critical systems; financial and operational assessments; alternative communications with customers, employees, associated persons and regulators; alternate physical locations of employees; impact on critical suppliers, contractors, banks and counterparties; and regulatory reporting.

Varying Disruptions: Significant business disruptions can vary in their scope, such as only affecting 527 Madison Avenue, 4th Floor, New York, NY 10022 (our "Main Office"); a single building housing the Main Office; the business district where the Main Office is located; the city where the Main Office is located or the whole region where the Main Office is located. Within each of these areas, the severity of the disruption can also vary from minimal to severe. It is our Firm's practice to replicate our critical electronic data on a near real-time basis to each of two geographically separate locations, enabling us to recover records from the Main Office and in some cases through remote access. Backups are performed at least nightly, and additional monthly backup tapes are stored off-site. To ensure reliability, the Firm performs testing of the Firm's replication, backup and communication systems on a semi-annual basis at a minimum.

If a significant business disruption occurs to only our Main Office or a building housing our Main Office, we will transfer our operations to an alternate available local site(s) where we would expect to recover affected files and systems, and to resume normal business operations within hours of the disruption. In a disruption affecting our business district, city, or region, we will transfer our operations to an available alternate site(s), and recover and resume business as soon as our affected communication and other electronic systems are restored. The Firm estimates that it would take approximately one to two business days to resume normal business operations in the event of any such widespread disruption. In the event of a cybersecurity disruption, our Firm will consider the nature of the incident in determining the appropriate measures for relief and recovery. These measures may at a minimum include notifying our customers and regulators, and providing credit monitoring services for our customers. Should any type of widespread or significant business disruption occur, we plan to continue business operations and will notify you by telephone or other available communication means about how to contact us.
